

"Progress is impossible
without change, and those who cannot
change their minds
cannot change
anything."

George Bernard Shaw

The words of George Bernard Shaw, give a lot to think. Can people change their habits? Can they even make a difference?

"Progress" means changing the world. For some people it is very difficult to get rid of a certain way of thinking. For example: thinking that all Jews are evil, or that women can't do anything and something like that.

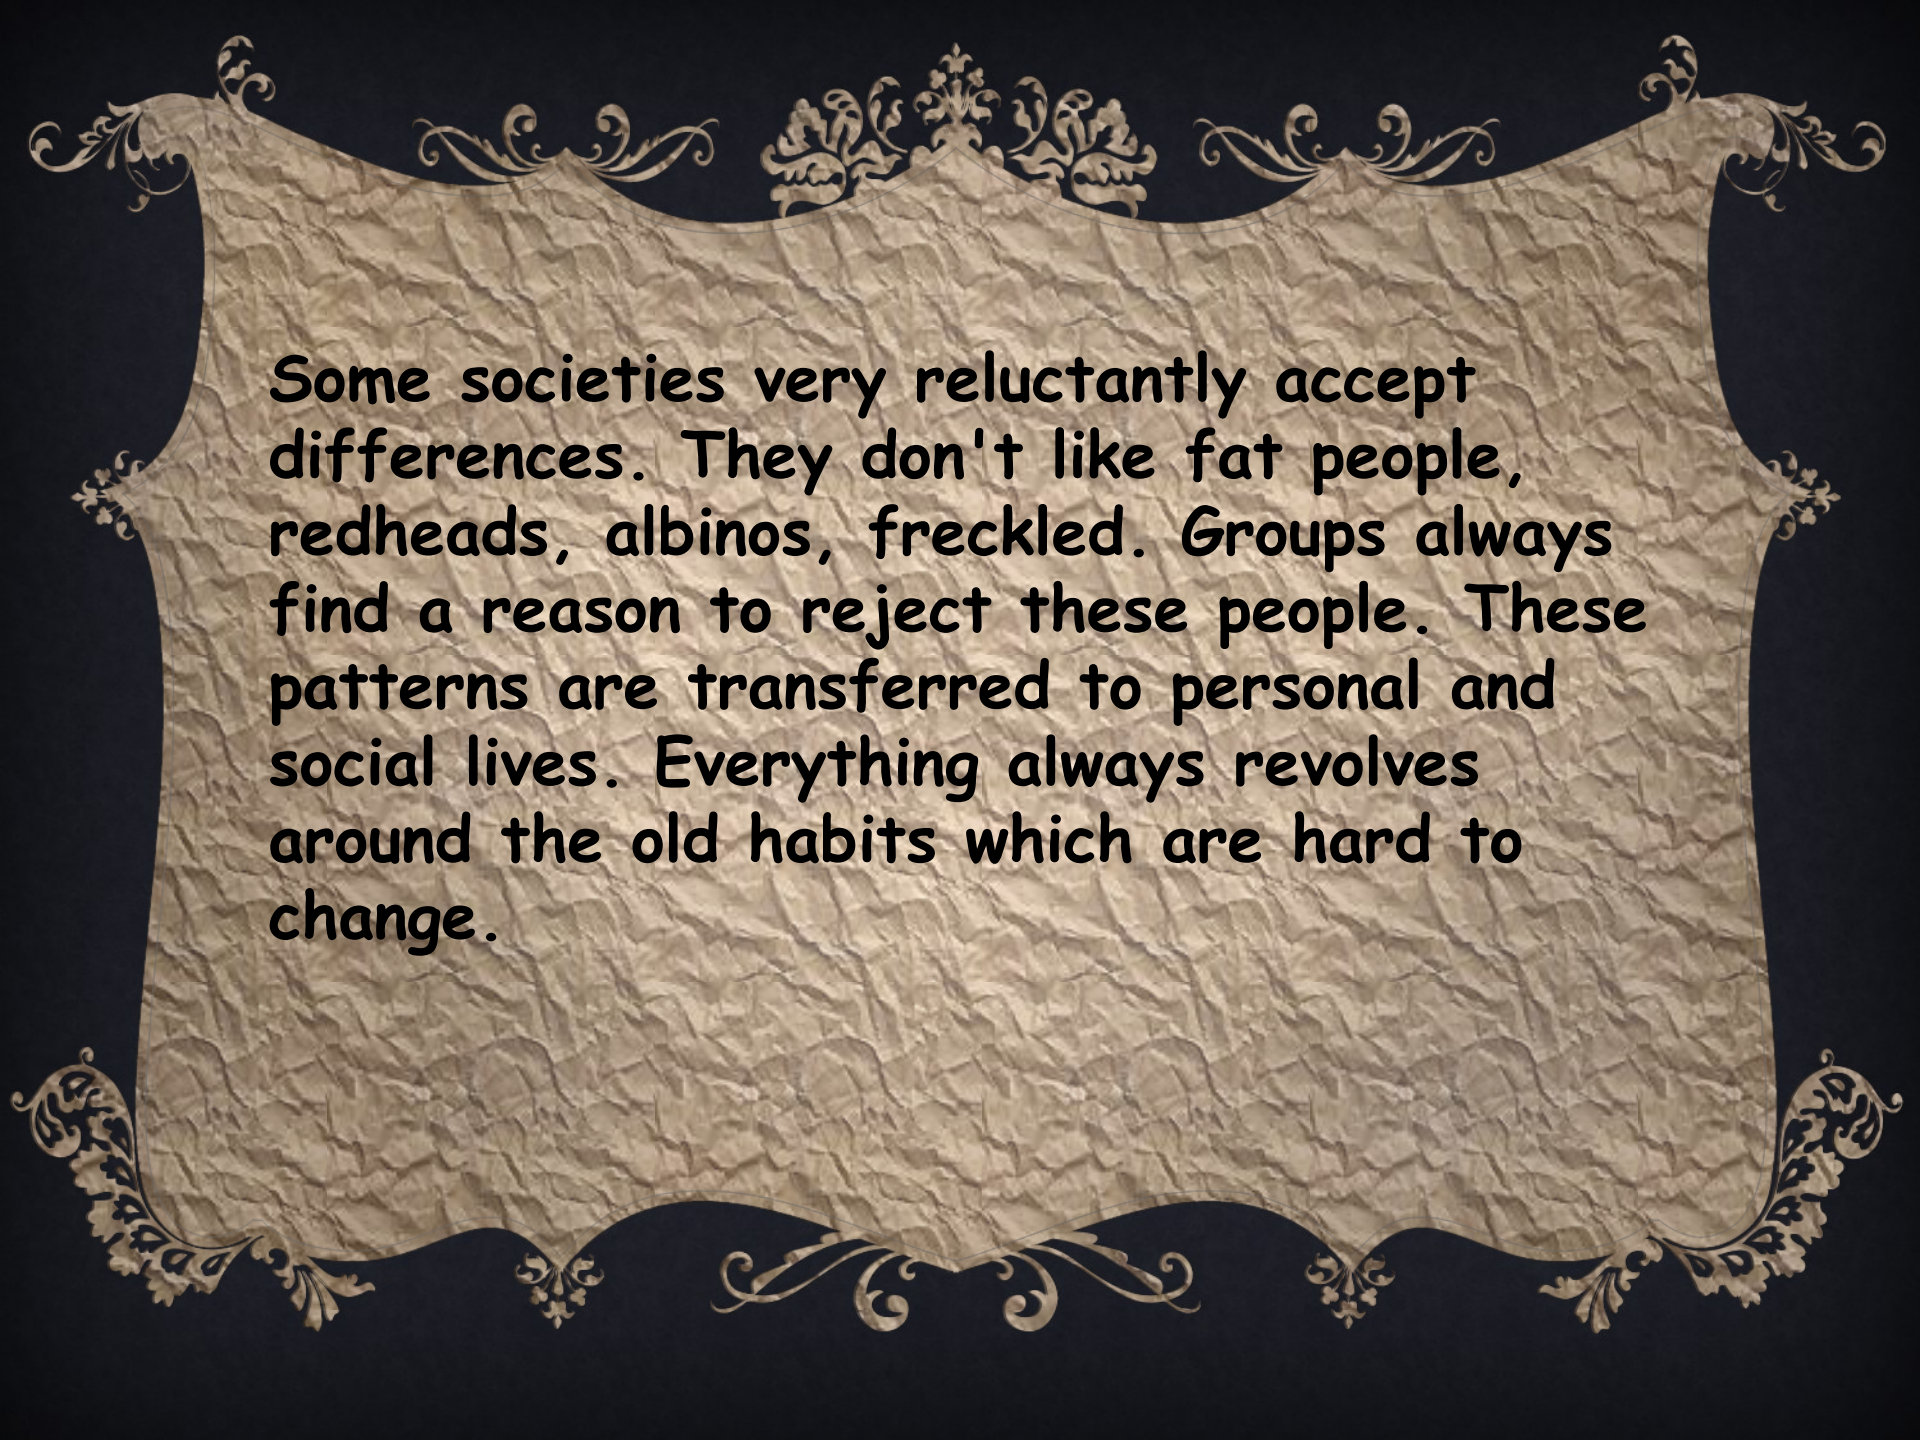

These people would have to open their minds and be open to other people's opinions and beliefs. It's not easy. Some people just can't change their beliefs that all atheists hate the world or that everyone has to be young and beautiful, because they grow up with that sort of thing drilled into their head.

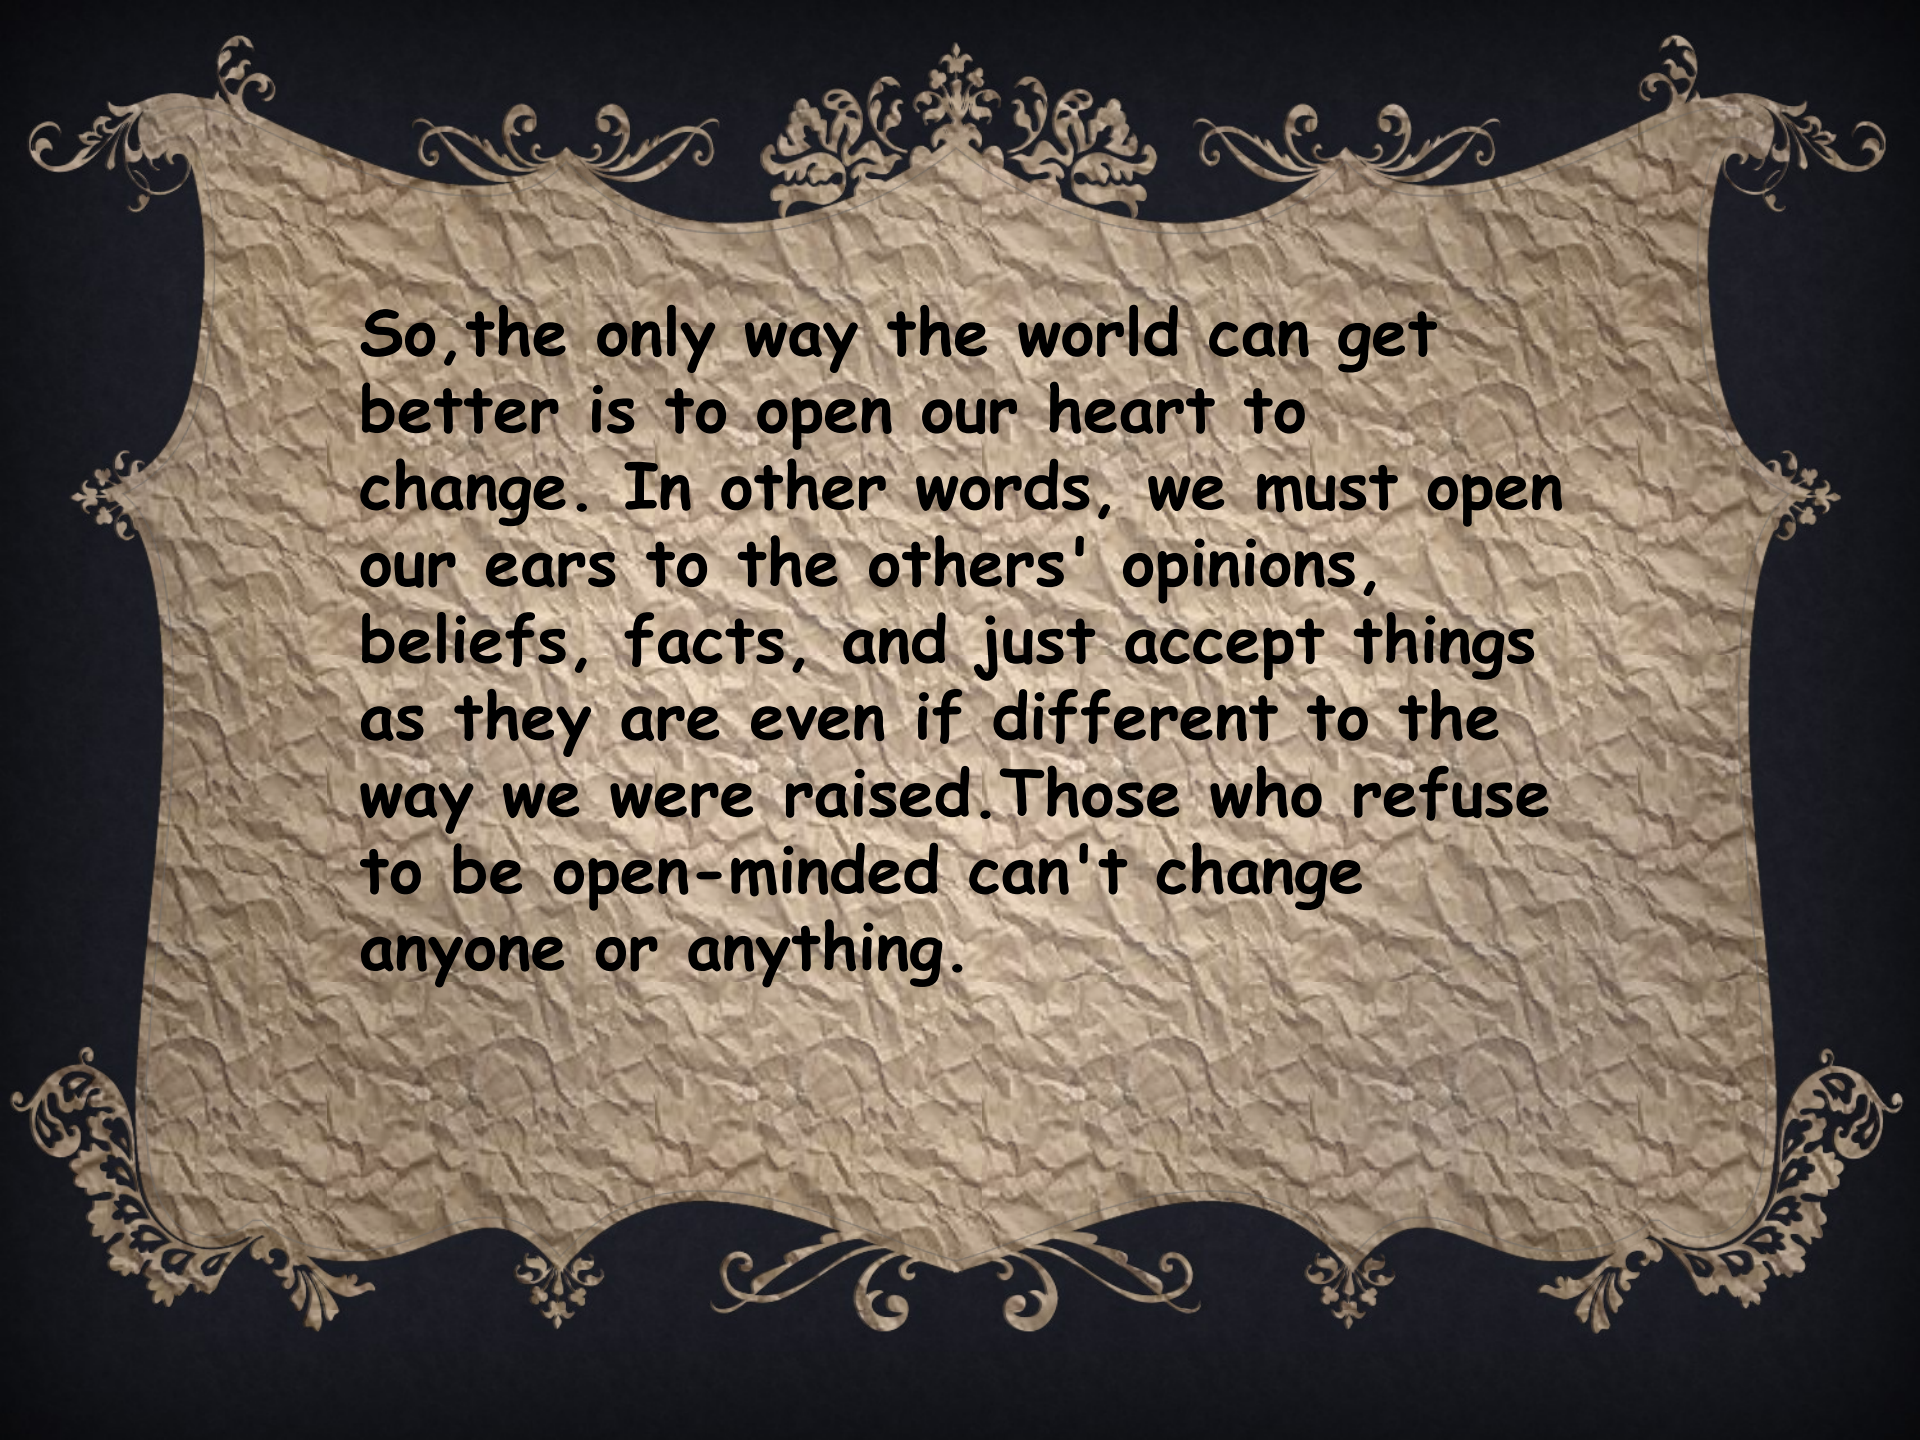

Polish people are sometimes very stubborn when it comes to their beliefs. We live in a free country, we can believe what we want to believe without any consequences. Our national mentality has been shaped for many years. We and our friends have the same beliefs and attitudes as ours parents.

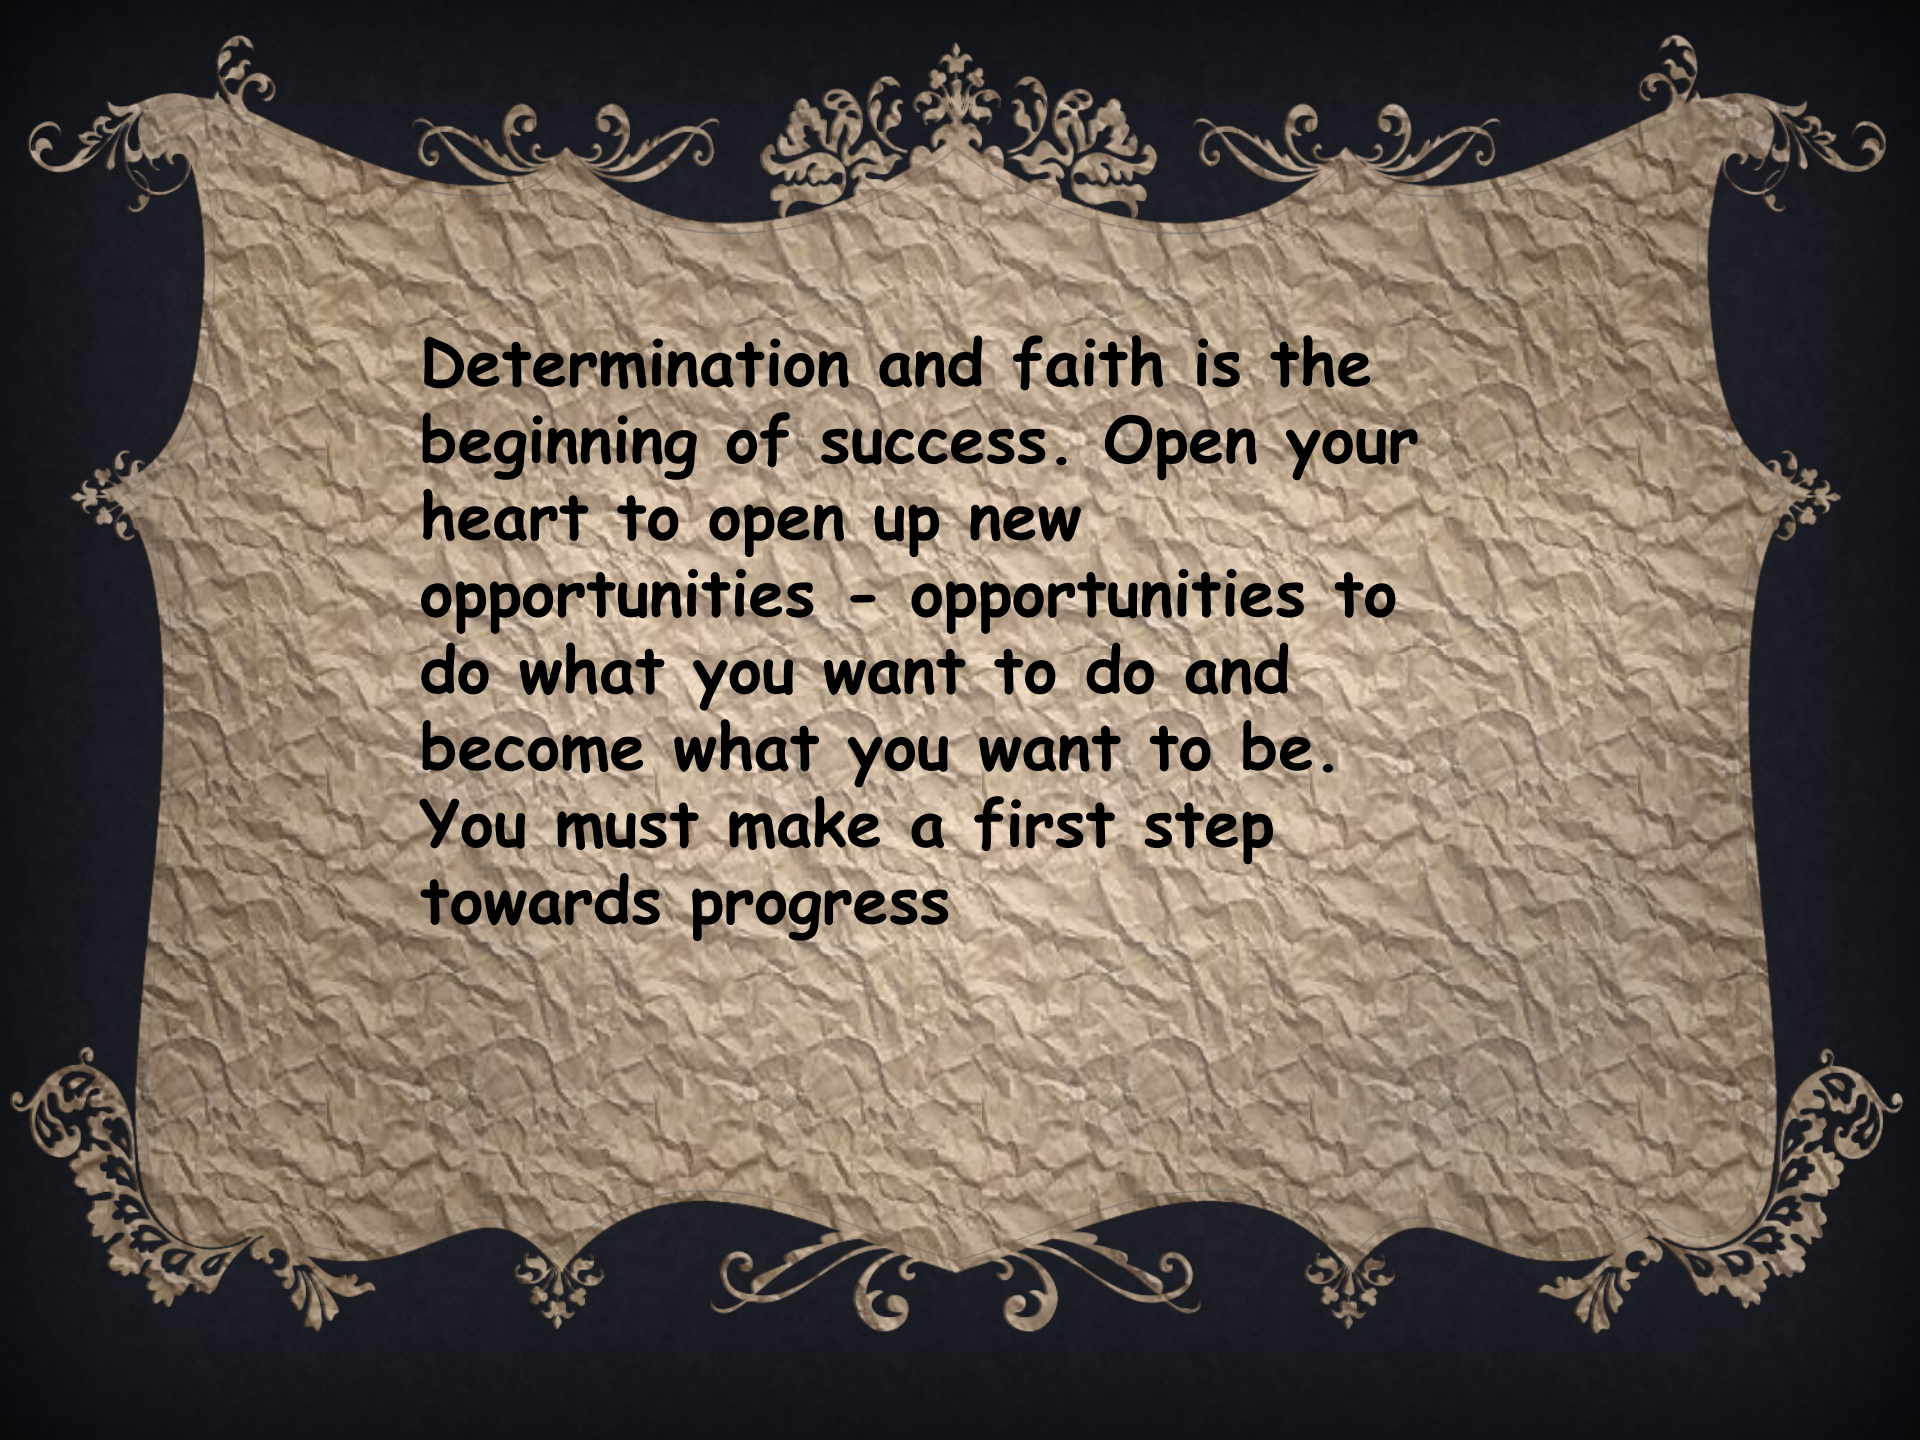

Some societies very reluctantly accept differences. They don't like fat people, redheads, albinos, freckled. Groups always find a reason to reject these people. These patterns are transferred to personal and social lives. Everything always revolves around the old habits which are hard to change.

So, the only way the world can get better is to open our heart to change. In other words, we must open our ears to the others' opinions, beliefs, facts, and just accept things as they are even if different to the way we were raised. Those who refuse to be open-minded can't change anyone or anything.

Determination and faith is the beginning of success. Open your heart to open up new opportunities - opportunities to do what you want to do and become what you want to be. You must make a first step towards progress
